5th English for Healthcare Conference

Hosted at the University of Belgrade, 16-17 September 2022

KEYNOTE SPEAKER: Kevin Harvey, University of Nottingham

The English for Healthcare Conference aims to encourage an exchange of ideas to stimulate discussion and to provide a platform for the presentation of new approaches to the teaching and learning of language and communication in medicine.

We particularly welcome proposals that relate to classroom practice and the teaching of English for medical purposes. We also welcome proposals that are research-based which help to develop our understanding of how language is used for the practice of medicine and healthcare. The event attracts language teachers and communication skills trainers working with health professionals, both in training and in the workplace, and practitioners from the medical translation and interpreting field.

Areas/Themes include but are not limited to:

- Content-Based and CLIL
- English Medium Instruction
- Medical Academic English
- Teaching language skills for EMP (Reading, Speaking, etc.)

- Assessment (e.g., Occupational English Test)

- Task-based and problem-based learning
- Role plays / Simulation in English for medical purposes
- Corpus linguistics in EMP
- Professional practice and discourse

- Communication skills training for healthcare
- Interpreting /translation for healthcare
- Medical Humanities
